Memory Verse

“He that shewed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise.”

Luke 10:37 (KJV)

The Story

A certain lawyer stood up and tempted Jesus, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? Jesus turned the question back on him: What is written in the law? how readest thou? The lawyer answered correctly, quoting the command to love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself. Jesus said, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live. Luke 10:25-28

But the man was not finished. Willing to justify himself, he asked, And who is my neighbour? It sounds like a request for information, but it is really a request for a boundary, a line marking who he is not required to love. Instead of drawing that line, Jesus tells a story. A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead. Luke 10:29-30

By chance there came down a certain priest that way, and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side. Likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side. Both men were religious workers, both saw the wounded man, and both chose distance. The Levite even came and looked before walking away, which makes his refusal more deliberate, not less. Luke 10:31-32

But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him. Samaritans and Jews despised one another, so the hero of the story is the last person the lawyer would have chosen. He bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, set him on his own beast, brought him to an inn, and took care of him. The next day he gave the host two pence and promised to repay whatever more was spent. Then Jesus asked which of the three was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves. The lawyer could not even say the word Samaritan; he answered, He that shewed mercy on him. Jesus said, Go, and do thou likewise. Luke 10:33-37
